About Us

Inner City Slickers (ICS) is an equine-based program that combines cowboy ethics and the magic of horses to help at-risk children and teens build Confidence, Trust and Hope. In addition, ICS teaches these children & teens to overcome fear and provides guidance to help develop and enhance their self-esteem.

Inner City Slickers was founded over 20 years by Michael McMeel, former drummer of the 70's super-band, "Three Dog Night". Following his music career, Michael enjoyed a very successful career in children's television programming and founded "The Awareness Foundation /Inner City Slickers" and pursued his passion of using horses to make a difference in the lives of at-risk children and their families. In addition, Michael has developed programs that assist children with Autism, ADD, ADHD and his programs are also instrumental in providing assistance to families who may require more structure and support as well.

The passion, experience, effectiveness and authenticity of Michael McMeel and Inner City Slickers has been widely documented in a variety of mediums, including television, radio and a number of printed publications and links to these resources can be found by visiting us online at: www.innercityslickers.com

 there's something magical about watching a child touch & rider a horse for the very first time.... **
